View from The Vicarage : by Rev Jenny Walpole A Mission Priority: Stewardship

Stewardship is one of our Mission priorities. It refers to the various ways we contribute to the life of the Church - through our time, our talents, and our resources. This may include volunteering to serve refreshments after services or joining one of our Church teams. Stewardship is about cherishing and caring for our resources, this includes how we invest our savings, look after the church grounds and our buildings. Financial support is a vital aspect of stewardship, which can take the form of one-off donations or regular giving. Financial support is essential for the Church's continued operation. St George's does not receive funds from the Diocese or the Government to cover our running costs. To maintain our church and its activities, we must raise the necessary funds ourselves.

So, how much do things cost? It costs almost £300 a day to keep our doors open. In 2024 it cost over £100,000 to run St George's (and that is quite separate from any money we spent on our buildings project). We want to be open and transparent about our finances. See our stewardship leaflet at the back of church for a breakdown of our costs. One of our biggest costs is for the Parish Support Fund. So, what is the Parish Support Fund? Well, Priests are paid for by the diocese, but they are funded by the parishes themselves through the Parish Support Fund (PSF). A significant portion of our expenditure goes towards this. Like many parishes across the country, we are unable to meet the full cost of having a Parish Priest. Going forward, for 2026 we made a generous and realistic pledge of £40,000 to the Parish Support Fund.

There are other causes we support as well. St George's is a registered charity, and we also support other charities including: Shrublands Food Bank, Orchard Park High School Foodbank, and Shirley Neighbourhood Care. At harvest we donate goods to The Manna, Day Centre in London Bridge. We also support overseas mission through fundraising and gifts from individual church members such as: USPG, Christian Aid and Disaster Aid for Jamaica.

So, how can you help? We welcome new volunteers! There are many ways you can be involved. Have a look at our Mission Action Plan for inspiration. As an Inclusive Church we want to include you and make best use of your gifts.

In terms of donations, we only ask you to donate (or increase your giving) to the Church if you can afford it. At St George's - broadly speaking we able to afford to we could do with a little bit more breathing space to do some of the things that we would like to do. We want to continue to keep the doors open, the heating on, the gas and electricity bills paid, to keep our current staffing levels, and continue to meet our Parish Pledge.

We would like to be able to do more than just get by – we want our church to flourish; we want to offer good hospitality and to invest in mission. Regular giving, as well as one-off gifts, provide crucial support and allow us to claim Gift Aid where possible. Regular giving helps greatly with budgeting and managing our cash flow.

Please consider joining the Parish Giving Scheme to set up a direct debit on this page: www.parishgiving.org.uk and then type in this parish code: 370637372

Thank you again, to everyone for all you give to St George's. Your generosity, your willingness, your volunteering time, your gifts, your ministry, your contributions both small and great. And all your sacrificial giving are greatly appreciated. And whatever you give, may it come from the heart, because you believe in it. Because you believe in the Mission and the future of St George's.

Valuing Weeds

Most folk classify as "weeds" anything they didn't plant. The dictionary definition is "any plant that is useless or troublesome". "Useless" and "troublesome" are, of course, not the same thing: a troublesome plant can be useful. Something you bought and planted can be troublesome in the conventional sense that it needs work to keep it within the space you had envisaged for it. But the key reality is that it is very rare for a plant to be literally "useless". Most "weeds" are multiply USEFUL; and the question for the gardener is whether the usefulness is so outweighed by any troubles that total removal is really necessary—rather than less destructive "management". Buttercups and daisies in the rose bed are not necessarily a bad thing, even though, in your perspective, it is (exclusively) a rose bed. The worms that help to keep the rose bed soil in good condition are not much interested in the roses; and the insects that visit the roses can not live on roses alone.

A useful brief survey offers reflection on 12 useful weeds:- dandelions feed bees when other food is in short supply; white clover fixes nitrogen; stinging nettles feed the caterpillars of our best-loved butterflies; ivy provides bird food and insect shelter; daisies are a great resource for pollinators; broadleaf plantain heals compacted soil; common chickweed helps the soil; creeping buttercup is a long-life pollen source; thistles attract goldfinches; ground ivy provides vital shelter; yarrow improves soil health (and, so it is said, human health); self-heal is a bee favourite.

Monstering and the Turner Prize

Two very unlike (but maybe related) pieces of news featured side by side back in December: the autistic and severely learning disabled Scottish 59 year old Nnena Kalu won the £25,000 Turner Prize; and Gerry McCann (father of the disappeared Madeleine McCann) announced a fresh attempt to reinstate the Levington enquiry into press abuse - saying that his family had been "monstered". It isn't the Scottish nationality shared by Nnena and Gerry that I want to focus on. It is the single characteristic labelling, Nnena is severely disabled, so "that says it all!", no need to look further. In her case, the label is accurate; but it is not the whole truth. Gerry and his wife were given by some speculators with no information (and nothing better to do) the wholly artificial label of having disappeared (in effect, murdered) their own daughter, Monstering is not in the English dictionary; but it well describes that labelling.

Sadly, we are all guilty of labelling—whether it is historical figures, prominent personalities, or people we know vaguely. Teachers can do it: one rather difficult boy told me he was just living down to his C Stream Secondary Modern School label. Vicars can do it: one vicar said of a boy who was doing rather well academically "That's the sort of boy we want in church!" Parents can do it: "That one's going nowhere fast!" Have you seen anyone speculating that in his 56 years Hitler maybe did something good? People who have committed crimes should suffer some consequences, but does "Criminal" describe that person's whole identity for ever?

It would be very understandable to think highly of someone who has never done anything wrong and never failed to take an opportunity to do good. It would be very understandable to think poorly of someone who has never done anything good and has seized every opportunity to do harm. But are there such people?

Two contrasting sins: Andy Bebington

We all know about the seven deadly sins – lust, greed, envy and so on – and about the ten commandments: keeping the sabbath holy, honouring parents ... But do we know about the matching pair of sins – despair and presumption? These two sins each reflect a misunderstanding about the love and mercy of God. They both relate to the afterlife – and if you don't believe in an afterlife, Christianity will mean far less than if you do. Despair is, effectively, thinking "I'm so wicked, I cannot be forgiven, and whatever I do cannot undo that". Apart from the error of thinking that "doing" anything can "earn" you a place in the kingdom, the thinker has found an impossibility. If God is almighty (oh, yes!) and "I cannot be forgiven", the thinker appears to have found something the omnipotent God cannot do. "Omnipotent" means "can do anything and everything" – despair is illogical .

A genuine case of despair was the young man (of Greek Catholic origins) who rang my office one day 35 years ago wanting to make a Will that afternoon, because he was going to put his head in the gas oven that evening. He told me he'd done things so heinous (yes, they were), that they couldn't be forgiven. He knew he would face eternal damnation – and couldn't live the rest of his life with that looming over his end, so wanted to bring that end closer. I talked with him for a while – in an open office – seeking to prevent a suicide and put to him the argument above about omnipotence. I told him that I was not a theologian, and that he needed to speak to someone who was; and pointed him towards the Jesuit Church in Farm Street – go and talk to them, I urged him. He didn't kill himself, although The Samaritans told me later that wanting to make a Will was a sign of serious intent.

"Presumption" is the other way round, almost "whatever I do, God's infinite mercy will mean I'll be with him in heaven regardless". This thinking constrains God's freedom to condemn where appropriate, thus elevating the thinker to a "god-like" status of ruling on what powers God can have. The "whatever I do" aspect of this thinking may or may not allow for a sin to be shriven before the grim reaper says "time's up". Presumption and despair both remove one of God's attributes – that of "judging" – by appearing to pre-judge a person as 100% one way or the other. Once again, we find the thinker apparently placing a fetter on God's omnipotence. If that's you, you are placing a restriction on His omnipotence! Are you going to tell Him? For some thinking attributed to Jesus, see Matthew 12:31-32: rejecting forgiveness!!

Re-purposing for Lent “Donkey Roads and Camel Treks” by Gemma Simmonds

...er... apart from this little hiccup... it was an excellent church pancake supper...

Servus servorum Dei

You might recognise this Latin. It means Servant of the servants of God; and goes back to Pope Gregory the First in the 6th Century. It was meant as, and still serves as, a reminder of the power of humility. Top people being servant people. Christ the Servant King. In our own time, the Pope washing the feet of criminals in prison is a powerful reminder of that Jesus message about being called to serve.

Makes you think? Gives you the opportunity to think? Andy Bebington

A winner of a Nobel Prize for Literature wrote, in the early-mid 1960s, the following last verse ...

In many a dark hour, I've thought about this –
That Jesus Christ was betrayed by a kiss
But I can't think for you, you've got to decide Whether Judas Iscariot had God on his side.

Would the crucifixion, and subsequently (perhaps consequently) have happened if Judas' actions weren't either

- part of God's plan to help us all "step (voluntarily) back into line" or
- something planned by Satan and allowed by God?

If there hadn't been a Judas, or maybe there hadn't been a Judas who gave way to temptation, would Jesus have found some other way to show us that sacrifice isn't the end? That my old life could be discarded and a new life take its place? That his whole ministry was leading up to Calvary and that Judas (or someone) was necessary? This leads to all sorts of questions about God controlling, or influencing, day-to-day matters on earth; and about free will. These are knotty issues well outside my theological or philosophical boundaries, so you'll have to ponder them for yourselves, or read something from one of The Doctors of The Church ...

The writer? Well, he was American and he was Jewish. Did you recognise the quote, or guess the writer? It was Bob Dylan, asking about belief in divine support for the American perspective on things.

Editor's Note: You could read the Gospels as saying that Judas did it for the money. However, the giving back of the money and the suicide really do make that an unlikely explanation. More plausible, is the idea that Judas was impatient, and, as a militant, wanted to force the hand of Jesus: to get Him to summon the four legions of angels and overthrow both Romans and Jewish collaborators. The Gospels report large numbers of people wanting the Messiah to take control (rather than go in self-surrender to the cross). I treasure the story of the Disciples meeting with Jesus in heaven, and saying "Shut the door, and let's party!".....and Jesus saying "I'm leaving the door open.....for Judas!)

Which bit of which Bible?

If you have attended a service at St George's, you will know that the service draws heavily on the Bible: usually an Old Testament reading, a New Testament reading (commonly from one of the Letters), and a Gospel reading; sometimes a Psalm; a talk/sermon probably based on the Gospel reading; and hymns and prayers which are often Bible-based. If you have looked closely at the paperwork, you will have noticed that different versions of the Bible are used: at All Age services, we tend to have a plain English version, with younger listeners in mind. On other occasions, we may have a Bible version which sounds great, but is maybe a bit harder to understand. You don't get the Bible in its original language, since most of us struggle a bit with Hebrew and Greek, and with the Latin into which Hebrew and Greek were first translated.

You will have your own favourite Bible passage(s) [which you might want to share here] and your own favourite Bible English translation(s). Here is the well-loved Letter to the Romans chapter 8 verse 38 –39 in a variety of English translations - in this case the different versions are subtly, rather than hugely, different::

New Living Translation And I am convinced that nothing can ever separate us from God's love. Neither death nor life, neither angels nor demons, neither our fears for today nor our worries about tomorrow—not even the powers of hell can separate us from God's love.

King James Version For I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, Nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord.

Good News Version For I am certain that nothing can separate us from his love: neither death nor life, neither angels nor other heavenly rulers or powers, neither the present nor the future, neither the world above nor the world below—there is nothing in all creation that will ever be able to separate us from the love of God which is ours through Christ Jesus our Lord.

Message Version I'm absolutely convinced that nothing—nothing living or dead, angelic or demonic, today or tomorrow, high or low, thinkable or unthinkable—absolutely nothing can get between us and God's love because of the way that Jesus our Master has embraced us.

Poetry Page: : Strong Son of God, Immortal Love: Alfred Tennyson

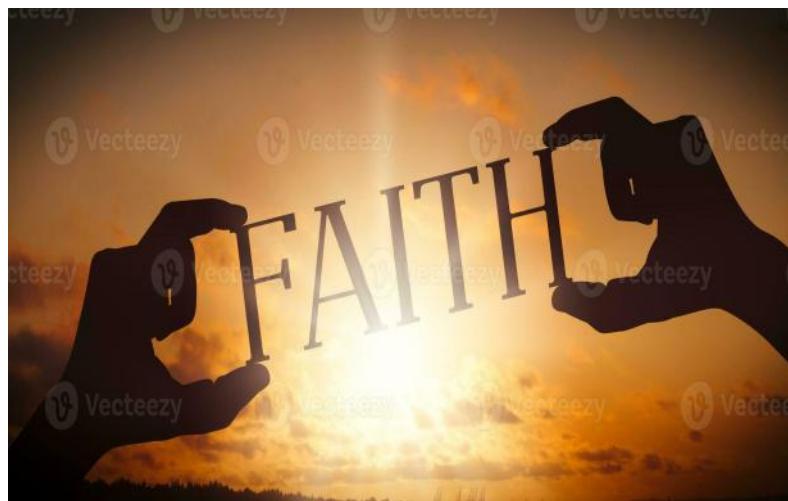

*Strong Son of God, immortal Love,
Whom we, that have not seen thy face,
By faith, and faith alone, embrace,
Believing where we cannot prove;*

*Our little systems have their day;
They have their day and cease to be:
They are but broken lights of thee,
And thou, O Lord, art more than they.*

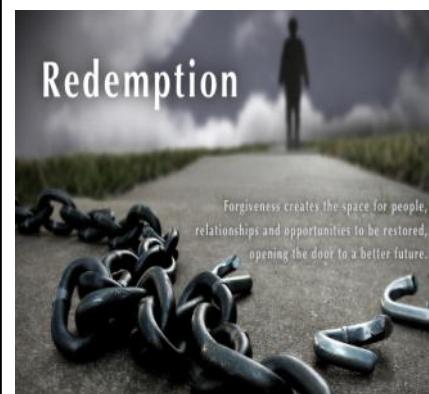

*We have but faith: we cannot know;
For knowledge is of things we see;
And yet we trust it comes from thee,
A beam in darkness: let it grow.*

*Let knowledge grow from more to more,
But more of reverence in us dwell;
That mind and soul, according well,
May make one music as before*

That odd business of Praying; 173 : Jesus died for ME (and Hitler and.....)

"To the Father, in the Spirit, through the Son" is the basis of many Christian prayers: indeed what makes Christian prayer distinctive. Though our best-known Christian prayer, the Lord's Prayer, only names the Father...and, arguably, doesn't even hint at Spirit and Son.

We approach the Father in confidence because the Son died for us.

Now "for" can mean more than one thing: it can mean on behalf of, instead of, for the benefit of. We see the ultimate hero as someone who dies in order to save someone else from dying: The person who gets into a burning car to rescue the trapped driver. The person who gets into the burning car with the driver to die alongside the driver weird rather than heroic? But, "We all die, despite the death of Jesus.. No rescue from death there!" There is some "saving from death" Bible language, and there are hints that some early Christians thought the end of the world would come before their own physical death. But mostly Christians have always (for good reasons!) expected death.

Just to get it out of the way: another way of looking at Jesus dying for us is that hymn line suggesting the death was "to satisfy the wrath of God": God so angry with us that He had Jesus die instead of us!!! It maybe makes a little more semi-sense if you say God as Jesus died to satisfy God's anger as Father.....rather than thinking of Father and Son as distinct people!

Nobody is ever going to make this "simple". And if you think in terms of "In the beginning, God"...and only God, all creation is created from God by God: so the experiences of all created things is the experience of God. But try this:- The Birth, Crucifixion and Resurrection of Jesus as God Incarnate are God showing us that He is there alongside us in all we experience (not least the pain); and, through showing us this, God is showing us that the end of the story is For-

Bible Bite

It can be read in the Bible in 1 Samuel 2:11-17, 22-25, 3:1-21

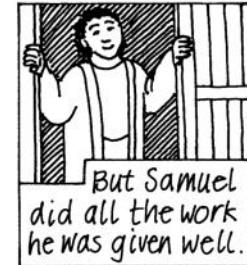

Eli's sons were also priests, but they helped themselves to what people had brought to give to God.

A short story from the Bible

As soon as he was old enough to leave his parents, Samuel went to live at God's temple in Shiloh, with the priest, Eli...

Eli talked to them about it. They ignored him.

But Samuel did all the work he was given well.

One night, after everyone had gone to bed, Samuel heard someone calling him.

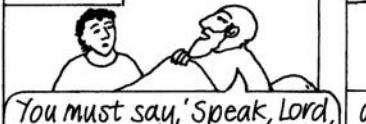

He thought it was Eli, so he ran to him.

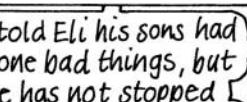

It happened again.
 I didn't call. Go back to bed.

The third time, Eli knew it must be God calling Samuel.

You must say, 'Speak, Lord, your servant is listening.'

God called Samuel again, and Samuel answered as he had been told.

I told Eli his sons had done bad things, but he has not stopped them. Now, even being sorry will not make up for what has happened.

The next morning, Eli demanded to be told what God had said.

Samuel was afraid, but he told him.

He is God. He will deal with us as is right.

God continued to talk to Samuel. He became known throughout Israel.

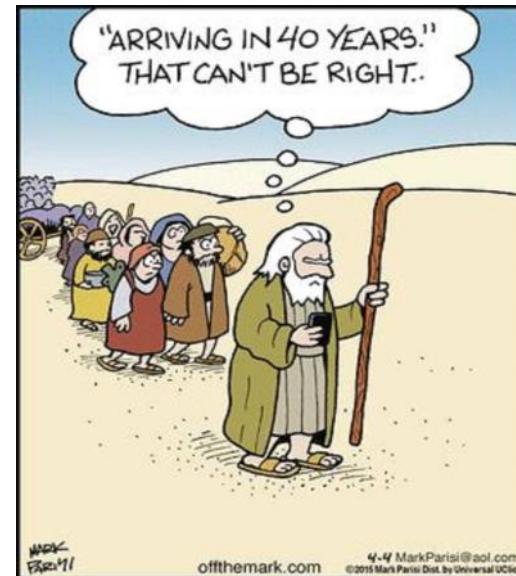

Listening and Being Deaf

Conventions about bringing up children have varied from time to time and place to place, and indeed between different groups in the same country: strictly a nuclear family responsibility, wider family involvement, fostering as a norm, community responsibility..... Here, Samuel at a very young age becomes the responsibility of an old man who has not succeeded in getting his own birth sons to listen to him. Those sons have sold out to the gods of privilege and greed. Eli makes a better job of listening to and learning with (and from) little Samuel. You could have forgiven Eli for slapping Samuel down when Samuel reported his God message.....Why should God talk to Samuel rather than talking to Eli directly??? But Eli was really already aware of the message that was now being reinforced by the rather puzzled little boy .

As to "Vicarage Children" going away from the faith... In more recent times., some vicarage children have become priests, and some become atheists. In the days of Samuel and Eli, succession was common practice: in effect, sons could become priests and atheists. If you think about it, you can see possible influences that might push vicarage children in or out; but they will make their own choices. On balance, you have to respect Eli for his reaction to the reinforced message—though perhaps thinking that the boss priest could actually have acted more forcefully in relation to his sons. (A police investigation into theft of Temple gifts would not have exonerated Eli.)

Children hear and notice - sometimes more than the adults would wish. Children also imagine: teachers and social workers have to cope with stories by the children about their parents that are damaging but totally unfounded...and often not even intended to be damaging. That prompts the really big question. Samuel got God messages. Eli got God messages. I dare say the sons got God messages. The question is "How do you recognise a God message?" In this case, it isn't so tricky: everybody knew the rules that Eli's sons were breaking. However, you don't have to be very old to have encountered someone who believes firmly something that you are 99% certain is untrue. And terrorists include many people who are firmly convinced God has told them to kill other people. What are maybe God messages can usefully be talked through with a friend, as well as thought through. Jesus was called mad for what He said about Himself; but people recognised the value of what He did.

Are there any jokes in the Bible?

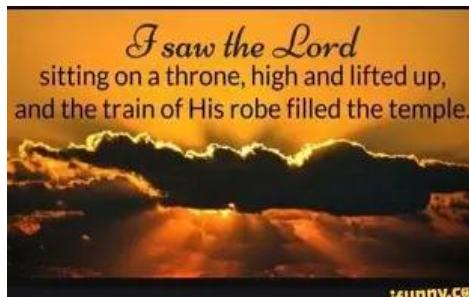

There is no Zondervan "All the Jokes of the Bible" to line up with "All the Miracles of the Bible!", "All the Proverbs of the Bible", etc, etc; but the answer is YES! If you don't believe me, try googling Bible jokes. It seems a bit odd to say that we sometimes take the Bible too seriously; but missing the jokes is to miss the point.

Start with "Genesis", the first of the Bible books: the beginning of the Bible narrative. Adam and Eve (first human beings) are starkers – no clothes. They hear God in the garden, and, embarrassed, hide themselves - at least that is their excuse. This is the pregnant woman saying to the midwife: "I will not take my clothes off!"

In the New Testament, we have the fisherman Peter saying to the Messiah Jesus: "No, you've got it all wrong: don't even go there!" We also have Peter (the fisherman!) seeing his lord and master walking on the water (the natural environment of fishermen, but in the relative safety of a boat) and decides he would like to try that. Then comes "Blimey it's wet!"; and a near drowning.

Or, back to the Old Testament: Jonah believes in and worships the Lord of all the earth. He gets his marching orders from that omni-present/ omniscient deity....and decides to hide! Then there is Solomon (the wisest man ever). Faced with two women each claiming a child to be their child, he says "Why not have half each?" One of the women signs up to having a cut up half baby. What... is she going to do with half a bloodied corpse?

... and He is high and lifted up: Andy Bebington

Many years ago, a colleague gave a challenge – he'd traced his family back to the Battle of Hastings and could anyone go further back? His ancestor had been Standard Bearer to Duke William (I have since traced my family back to 975AD ...)

The point about being a Standard Bearer is that you accompany the monarch, or the noble, to let everyone know he/she is there or is coming. In battle, your job is to act as a "base", a rallying-point, for soldiers on your side to retreat to, or head towards, when things get difficult. You need to be strong (to hold the Standard high) and brave (to use one hand for the Standard, leaving only one for your sword – your colleagues would have a shield as well as a sword, you can't have both). So, if a Standard Bearer shows where you would be among friends, somewhere which is safe, somewhere to have your wound dealt with, what does this say to us about Christ being raised high on the cross, or about church frequently having a cross high on the tower or spire?

People locally have commented on the recent lack of lighting of the cross atop St George's so it's clear that this is a local landmark of some consequence. Do we see the cross on top of village churches, as we walk, cycle or drive through the countryside, as being a sort of magnet, drawing us into the church? We do, when on holiday; in fact, many of our cycling routes are designed to take in the local churches, not only to give us a scenic view of the local area but also to give us a chance to go into a church, say a prayer, read about the church's history in the local context, and about notable people who worshipped there in times past.

"Lifted high" – as Jesus was, on the cross, drawing us to him? I think of a large table covered with a cloth. If you lift the cloth by pulling up the very centre, forming (if you like) a tent, not only does the centre rise (because you're lifting it), the edges are drawn towards each and to the centre, too. As Christ pulls us upwards, we move closer to each other (whether we like it or not); much as heading for the Standard Bearer in the midst of a battle draws us closer to our friends in the fight, to get closer to Jesus Christ and, as a result, to our neighbours?

Maybe a SmileIt hurts

A little girl told her mother one day before lunch that her stomach was hurting. Her mother replied: "That's because it's empty, you have to put something into it!" That evening the minister and his wife came for dinner. The minister looked a bit rough and explained that his head was hurting him. The little girl gave him a sweet smile and said encouragingly: "That's because it's empty, you have to put something into it!"

God made us

A little girl sitting on her grandfather's lap reached up to touch his wrinkled cheek. "Grandpa, did God make you?" "Yes, sweetheart," he answered, "God made me a long time ago." "Oh," she paused. "Grandpa, did God make me too?" Her grandfather assured her that He had. Feeling his wrinkled cheek again, she observed, "God's getting better at it, isn't He?" (very wise for his age)

Church bulletin notices that did not come out quite right...

We congratulate our youth group for raising nearly £500 for drug abuse.

Creator of all seasons, let the fresh winds of spring sweep through my heart. Wash away the heaviness of winter, and plant seeds of hope, joy, and courage within me. May I grow in kindness, bloom in gratitude, and bear the fruits of love. One or 101, I can make a new beginning: living out a faith that is always new. In the strength of a Spirit that is always refreshing. Amen.

Note the Sunday 1st February 4 p.m., fund-raising talk in church: learn about our church building as you sit in our church building.

Our Neighbours/ Companions/ Fellow Creatures

Some neighbours are more comfortable to live with than others, though most of us most of the time don't think about killing our less congenial human neighbours. If you know of our reputation in this country as one of the most nature-depleted countries in the world, you will know that this rather technical-sounding description means that we have been all too successful at killing our non-human neighbours—sometimes deliberately, often thoughtlessly. Our Land Management Plan for St George's highlights encouraging, supporting, nurturing, our nonhuman neighbours. These include the following: some of which you will definitely have seen; others of which you might have seen; and two of which you are unlikely to have seen, but.....

- 1) Hedgehog
- 2) Fox
- 3) Pipistrelle Bat
- 4) Badger
- 5) Field mouse
- 6) Grey Squirrel

The left column pictures feature the species you are most likely to see in the church grounds. I have seen the mouse and pipistrelle.... And the hedgehog (dead) not far from the church.

No disrespect to the cats and dogs that visit the church garden.
